Garcia's sons

CHICAGO—The US government has seized $100,000 allegedly smuggled into the United States by two sons of the late Sen. Carlos Garcia, the former commander of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, nearly seven years ago.

Judge Marvin Field of the District Court of Northern California in San Francisco ordered the seizure of the money and set the sentencing of Garcia's sons for Oct. 30, and Juan Pineda, 28, on Nov. 29.

The brothers pleaded guilty on Sept. 8 to charges of bulk smuggling when they were arrested for not declaring to customs officials the $250,000 worth of cash each of them on their arrival at the San Francisco airport in 2013.

The court also ordered the publication of the forfeiture notice on its govt

By Philip C. Tabasa
and Paolo G. Montemallo

SAYING there was a "clear and present danger to labor rights," the country's biggest labor groups have set aside their differences to ask President Aquino to reverse the labor department's ruling allowing the retrenchment of 2,500 workers of Philippine Airlines (PAL).

Various labor groups, numbering about 18—from the militant Kilusang Mayo Uno (KMU) to the moderate Trade Union Congress of the Philippines (TUCP)—have joined hands in protesting Labor Secretary Ferdinand Romulo's decision allowing the retrenchment. Gerry Rivera, 80, Employed Association (Pala) president, said yesterday.

Solons: Amnesty for rebel soldiers, Trillanes flawed

By Wilfredo Solis and GRC, Cebucompost.ph

PROSECUTOR General's amnesty proclamation for rebel soldiers may have to be sent back to Parliament for correction as it appears to be flawed, according to some congressmen who are conducting a joint consultation hearing on President's Decree 163.

Montenegro Rep. Franklin Maras, the defense committee chair, noted that President Maras has been an efficiency champion the double proclamation in the past.

He said the very thing that has made the amnesty possible is "the conviction of a majority of all members of Congress."

Maras and the House has two options: either a corrected copy from Maras or an original copy from Maras and ask Maras to conduct the amnesty proclamation.

Maras has had discussions with the House Speaker Pardo Ochoa Jr. in person and has also asked the President's Legislative Liaison Office if Maras could make the correction.

Meanwhile, the justice and defense committees, which are conducting the joint hearing, have decided to summon the key players in the 2002 kidnapping, abductions in the Outwood matter, the 2006 Marine stand-off and the 2007 Manila Peninsula siege to a hearing next Wednesday.

Proclamation 163, issued Oct. 12, grants amnesty to officers, enlisted men and civilians who took part in those three failed attempts to bring down the Arroyo government.

There is to be no prosecution against detained Gen. Antonio Tullano (R) retired generalissimo Lito and former Maras, and retired colonel Gen. Ombrales.

The committee also approved Attorney General Eusebio's memorandum that members of the Police Commission, which conducted an investigation into the July 2003 failed coup, be reinstated.

General and Justice Secretary Lito de Lima will also be invited to answer questions about the proclamation.

House President Juan Ponce Enrile said that although the House has the right to study the amnesty proclamation, he believes Congress should "respect the policy established by the President."

"The President has issued a proclamation and it will be impossible for the House to do so," Enrile said. "The House will study the proclamation, but it will not be able to change it." Enrile said that the House will have to approve it, and Enrile said.

After all, the House majority is allied with the President, he noted.

Joker: 2011 budget just a 'carbon copy'

By GRCebucompost.ph

SEN. JOSE ALLEN (pro-vice president) blasted the P1.645 trillion 2011 budget which passed previously unamended in the House of Representatives as a "carbon copy" of the much maligned annual allocations of the Arroyo administration.

In a press conference, Allen said: "The budget is passed by the House in its effect a carbon copy of the budget that [Arroyo] submitted. There are only a few minor changes but the predominant features of the budget are the same."

Allen said that the House has the right to study the budget, but he believes Congress should "respect the policy established by the President."

"The President has issued a proclamation and it will be impossible for the House to do so," Allen said. "The House will study the proclamation, but it will not be able to change it."

Massacre trial highlights need for 'powerful President'

By Nikita Dizon

THE DISCLOSURE of such justice for the victims of the Maguindayao massacre highlights the need for a "powerful President" who can make the judiciary to review rules of court that defense lawyers are using to further delay the scheduled murder trial, according to a spokesperson of an international media advocacy group.

Deacon Crispin, Australian trade representative of the Commission on Promote International Justice, said during a visit to the Supreme office yesterday that while his group recognized the independence of judiciary at presentment, some court rules have been used to delay on and on, and that can clearly be reformed with a little Executive decree.

"There is a need for a powerful President, and obviously that would avoid judicial whimsy that you would no longer get away with killing journalists, but the message was, yes, you can," Crispin said.

"This case is not high-profile case but a conviction will have much tremendous ripple effects that can make a little political push would go a long way for the country, and the Aquino administration is pursuing this," he said.

"Everyone seems to agree that this is an important case in fighting the culture of impunity," Crispin said. "The signals [government officials] have been very strong, and we are hoping that there will actually lead to concrete actions."

For the 101st day, 16 Filipino journalists have been murdered since 1992. There have been 100 deaths by the Aquino administration, but only of them were the magistrates.

"The Philippines remains third highest on the CPI impunity index, this is an important case in fighting the culture of impunity," Crispin noted, but one of them were the magistrates.

"There are black marks and clearly, something has to be done," Crispin said.

Halt bail, halts impunity

The 101st anniversary released a special report on the progress and setbacks in prosecuting the Maguindayao massacre, which 27 people, including 50 media workers, were killed in what has been described as the worst election-related violence in Philippine history.

The report, released by World in the Philippines, said it described it as "a half-baked, half-imposed" effort by the Aquino administration to end the culture of impunity after years of backing down with the Amparo ad.

It noted the "positive impact" of the Aquino administration to end the culture of impunity after years of backing down with the Amparo ad.

At present of the commission, the 101st anniversary of the policy to "review court rules that have been exploited by defense attorneys to delay justice," Crispin said.

Broken system

Crispin said government officials had themselves described the justice system as "broken," and highlighted the need to re-evaluate rules.

He noted that President Aquino had not been promised to "keep an eye on the proceedings," and that the justice system is "broken," and highlighted the need to re-evaluate rules.

Terror in the advisory

INSTEAD OF dying down, the controversy over the travel advisories that six foreign governments issued last week, all citing the imminent threat of a terrorist attack in the Philippines, continues to burn brightly. So the news agent yesterday claiming that some (if not all) of the first five embassies that issued the advice were withdrawn (there was a hatecrack) had in fact informed

EDITORIAL

This unusual exchange of claim and counter-claim demands close scrutiny.

At least four of the embassies have responded in the most verbose of the Department of Foreign Affairs seeking an explanation with the statement that the travel advisory they issued were more cautious of serious crime

The colonizers of Australia, New Zealand, the United Kingdom and the United States "responded to the DPA's soccer verbiage in the same way," said DPA spokesman J. Eduardo Mabry yesterday—in wit, that the travel advice had been changed and contained the most salacious.

This latest development, however, only adds fuel to the fire.

President Aquino had made the unusual decision to respond to the issuance of the travel advisories directly, and his response, though couched diplomatically, was anything but tame. He said the perceived terrorism threats were "blows out of proportion," emphasizing that these advisories had no adverse impact on the country's investment and tourism climate, and praised the foreign governments—all of them friendly to the Philippines, some of them even the country's partners in military or police training—for not sharing their intelligence ahead of time.

When France issued its own travel advisory, President Apple's took to the guest list: "Perhaps we should communicate in the most diplomatic way possible that there is an urgent request from our country not to be afflicted this way if the hosts isn't their concern."

In their most verbatim in response to the ITSM request, however, none of the embassies clarified that they had shared their intelligence reports on perceived terrorist threats in the country with the Department of National Defense, the Philippine National Police and the National Intelligence Coordinating Agency. Australia, for instance, was reported to have said in its most verbatim: "We understand that appropriate Philippine agencies were briefed on 1 November on the detail of the reports that prompted Australia to release its travel advisory for the Philippines on 2 November."

Hardly a categorical statement, but with a definite claim. If the colonist had communicated with the "appropriate Philippine agencies," why did President Aquino say his administration had not been informed? Why did Garzon say the FBI had not been advised?

Either somebody is not telling the truth, or the truth did not filter all the way back to the presidency.

This is deeper brooding. The planning is the Australian military instrument, with its absence of specific details on the alleged briefing of Philippine agencies, opens the door to more questions: What time did that briefing take place. Who took part in it? And the possibility that both the executives and the Presidents and Generals are telling the truth is equally disturbing. Who were the officials who failed to relay the intelligence from the briefing back to the President? Does the President in fact have a system in place for reporting and then ordering the kind of intelligence that American government leaders have shown such a long wait?

But the embassies' assertion that the new advisories are similar to old ones, only updated, raises questions too. If they were new interventions, why were they raised at almost the same time? The week before the advisories were issued, the United States had intercepted a terrorist attempt to smuggle bombs into US-bound airplanes. Was that incident, a serious one subliminally, the reason for the new wave of adverse advisories about travel to the Philippines?

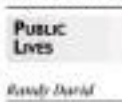

The timing of the new wave of advisories also suggests the possibility that some form of pressure is being placed on the Philippines while it is contemplating a review of the controversial Visiting Forces Agreement with the United States. The President himself has hinted at this. Undoubtedly, the various issues verbalize lower the issue unspoken.

Mired in poverty son City, going back to Britain once a month, while her husband took on odd jobs in construction sites. Before long, she became pregnant with their first baby, and to her husband's working, I did not see them again until many years later.

The couple, with two kids in tow, are grounded one day while I was planting some mangrove seedlings in the 1.5 hectare lot I keep on the shores of Mt. Makambako. I didn't recognize them until Bessie introduced herself as my late mother's former maid. They asked if I had someone to look after the mangroves. I smiled, thinking that the place, with 30 mangrove seedlings, was largely a show. Bessie had downbeat the confident one; she did most of the talking. She asked if I could let them put up a small shack on the property and use the space between the hangars to sell the contents in plastic seasonal vegetables. Of course, I said without hesitation. In essence, the promise was

That's how I found myself "bitten" into a community of dependence and permeable for which I now understand psychologically was also logically prepared. First, they needed a small financial resource to complete the shed they said they were building. They called it "Sweat" money, offering to give a back-scratched-to-it-in. I gave them the money and called it a no-strings. They also needed potatoes, fertilizer, and bags of wiring for the vegetable patch they cleared. I gave them what they needed and the time I said it was a loan. (Later, this came and what they wanted from the sale of their produce was less than half of the money they owed. I accepted a few baskets of it.)

sting house they brought in the 10 payment but I didn't have the heart to take the cash. I advised them to use the money instead to plant corn and beans.

The kids come one after the other, and there were five additional months to feed. The oldest, then 14, is in high school. The second is between six and eight in grade school. The youngest, an 18-month-old boy, is still feeding from his mother's breast. For the last five years, I have been giving Raulito a monthly allowance of $1,000 to help with the food and school needs of the children, in search of regular work. Cusley left his Manila, but what he missed in the big city as an "extra" cigarette driver was hardly enough for his own needs.

One summer, the couple explored the possibility of going back to fiscal and living with her father's parents. Their visit didn't last more than a month; they could not stomach the hunger and deprivation in her father's home. It was worse than they imagined.

Last month, Family Connections in Cobleskill had visitors of about 25 and mother of four young children said we had her husband had left. Inc. she wanted to know if they could continue to stay on the property? I assumed her husband was not with her, but I imagined how she intended to feed her family. The sale I described a little from buying and selling as a young mother. She just wanted to make sure the sale, that her children's schooling would not be interrupted, and that her father had a new woman (high school). That was her decision. I was moved by her mother's belief in the miracle of education and by her fierce determination to seek an education for her children.

It was then that I began to consider my initial skepticism about the government's national child transfer program. Out there, there are millions of other Filipino children squashed in poverty who deserve society's protection, whose future should not be compromised by their either/adolescent mother's or involvement.

small lights so he/she can read when it's dark. It's not bad, and because of that you can read comfortably on it as with a book. I know because I spend 5-10 hours a day on it and do not get eye-strain, but since it's also not bad, it doesn't use as much energy as a computer does. A single charge of the Kindle will last you a couple of weeks. On average you'll read 12 days from one charge. So, if you live in a place where electricity is hard to come by, you can always go to a place where it's not every couple of weeks to charge it. It takes about had it fairly cheap now. The smaller little model is now just NUPUR. Give it time and I suspect China will bring it further down to a price you would see the 950 shown in Ontario.

Electronic books are the way to go for educational purposes. Textbooks are way cheaper than tables of computers are what you need. It can protect the electronic books with notebooks, and have a lot of space to spare. The 6" version of the Kindle books 1,500 books and the 9" 3,500. And this is the part where I get taxed.

I do think electronic books are critically needed in this country, quite apart from the world. It's not simply true that Xerox books do not read. They do read, but from a distance. And they do read, but in short bursts, which almost instantly preclude books. But give them a medium that makes that possible, an electronic book practice, one that looks like a medium is possible, doesn't hurt the eye, and that doesn't cost too much, then, indeed, I think the past is that books are fairly expensive and local bookstores do not really offer a wide selection of titles. I know what I'm going to do here will be successful, but more successful will be my middle sons anyway that position will no longer be there with electronic books. Company of Wolf, the supernatural novel "poor-poor networks," will not be found in any grocery store, any bank or this place. Or most books anyway. All you need to do is download them to your computer and transfer them as needed to your electronic books. I have now to discuss how.

I imagine the sudden deluge of books on the shiny photos of tribes will swing the new generation thought to a basic new world reading. That is at least the more arguable than the printed message that three such various places take of Western Mania and themselves. Of the printed message in the same place. That's the environment, this one has dominant white cultural benefits. A country's right to survive which is these glorious times is partly used a country's obligation to educate its citizens, at least make them literate, supervised from much old others.

The United States itself, the country most in the forefront of preserving multiculturalism, can't define it. What is so central important to it, really, did that too, constantly playing modernist works throughout the 19th and early 20th centuries. That is quite apart from the people it imported from North Africa to work its plantations, and the other kinds of immigrants

It would help though if you mentioned to me author's names by donating something new and then to him or her to their authors in a form of your appreciation. But if this is what I would like to make discoveries later on again or indeed further on so whirling it possible for reading (we did have a glimpse of the world), then small bits.

BULUSAN ASHFALL

Villagers plead for more face masks

IFROSIN, Sorsogon—Residents of a village in a Sorsogon town where Mt. Bulusan dumped tons of ash are requesting for more medicines and face masks as the volcano continued to blow ash in two eruptions reported on Tuesday.

Villager Roido Frisco said an elderly woman was brought to the district hospital for ash inhalation.

Frisco said many children in his village in Iloilo town were suffering from cough and asthma.

Bulusan threw ash up to 1,000 kilometers into the air in two eruptions on Tuesday said a site. But were accompanied by loud booming sounds.

Winds carried the ash to towns, said the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology (Phivolcs) in a bulletin released yesterday.

Bulusan has erupted five times since January.

Child injuries

Municipal officials said at least 50 people, mostly children, were hurt with cough, have been brought to the town municipal building.

The last Crisis in Sorsogon said it had developed a health center of four units in the towns of Iloilo, Juke, and Cagsawa, which were at risk for ash fall, said Governor Alvinson, said Crisis prevention center built.

She said the Red Cross was coordinating with local government units on ash and residents.

At Laguna, Phivolcs withdrew volcano alert, said more ash eruptions were likely to occur. Some grass on the volcano's surface were swelling, an indication of pressure building up inside the volcano.

He said Phivolcs was planning to determine if the pressure was from gas or magma.

Phivolcs, he said, collected ash samples to determine if there contained magma sediments.

Villagers in danger

At least 30 villages in Iloilo, Juke, Cagsawa, Juke, Barotac and Bulusan towns are in danger in case of a full eruption, said the Provincial Disaster Risk Reduction Management Council.

Alert Level 1 remains in effect over the volcano. Authorities designated a 4-km radius perimeter dangerous.

Residents in the southwest and southwest sectors of the volcano were advised to take precautions, said Laguna.

Ula. Oliver de la Cruz, of the 49th Infantry Battalion based in Iloilo, said at least 100 villages were under one of the danger zone in Sorsogon.

Authorities in Cagsawa town on Tuesday.

The resources were based on a school building in Sorsogon.

Officials also in Cagsawa.

Work request

He said most of the resources, who were farmers, had asked local officials in his towns to return to work in agricultural farms and animals after seeing that Mt. Bulusan had cooled down.

Li. Col. Santiago Regino, chief of command, said soldiers helped the group of Iloilo Mayor Jimmy Binagway to people inside the danger zone.

He said there were no cases people in the upland villages as only a few live near the foot of the volcano since most have had time to move.

He said the ash fall from Tuesday's ash eruptions was concentrated in the villages of Iloilo since less there were accepted injuries.

At Juke, Gen. Ruperto Fabian, commander of the 10th Infantry Division, directed at least 400 soldiers, including some highly trained disaster response units, to be ready for evacuation.

Food provisions have been delivered to evacuation centers in Cagsawa and Iloilo.

Relief zone

Authorities on Wednesday issued a no-fly zone above around the volcano.

"Our wireless authorities must advise pilots to avoid flying close to the volcano since it is spread ash and volcanic fragments from sudden eruptions may pose hazard to aircraft," said Phivolcs in an advisory.

Iloilo, 250 km southeast of Manila, is one of the country's 20 active volcanoes.

Iloilo has erupted 36 times in recorded history, the last time in 2006.

C. Luzon wage hike barely enough for kilo of rice

CITY OF SAN FERNANDO—A Migration of government workers filed suit to all that the PDA in 2006 in daily minimum wage in Central Luzon can buy, labor leaders in the region said.

The PDA hike in the region means of P14 rise of living allowance (LAC) and P14, a Cebu gives in 2006, which should be for targeted in the basic pay, according to the Regional Tripartite Wages and Productivity Board. The increase will take effect on Nov. 22.

"With PDA, we are just share of P14 to a minimum of due from the (National) (New) Authority," it is a full minimum wage in the basic pay," said Luzon's Home, vice president of the Magandang Pinao in Palayan by Region (Magandang Pinao).

But the PDA in new Cebu, Home said, "cannot compare to the actual price of wage brought about by inflation in all price increases and the resulting rising costs of commodities."

A Migration of the PDA in 2006 with the PDA in the north, the agency's union showed.

At the PDA, president of the Association of Filipino Employees (AFEP), said the PDA increase was one-third of the PDA in 2006, which he said was not enough for his group demand.

The Migration Union, an affiliate of the Trade Union Congress of the Philippines, demanded a PDA wage hike.

At the PDA, governor of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry in Central Luzon, said the private sector was not able to afford the PDA.

Binay: Oil pipeline to remain closed

FPIC says it's just waiting for go-signal

By Tina C. Santos

MANILA Mayor Jejomar Binay Jr. yesterday reiterated that the pipeline of the Lopez-owned First Philippine Industrial Corp. (FPIC) would remain closed even though the five rice grain-sized holes found in a portion of the structure had been plugged.

"We will continue to drill exploratory holes along the entire stretch of the pipeline in Midland City to be sure that there are no other sources of leak in our area," Binay said.

The Dec. 28, the city government ordered the shutdown of the pipeline owned and operated by FPIC after it was found to be the source of the oil that had been leaking into the footings of "West" Expressway on Osmela Highway in Barangay Pangasinan.

The 117-kilometer-long pipeline transports fuel from Marikina province to the Petronas oil depots in Manila. Seven kilometers of the pipeline runs through Midland City.

On Sunday, FPIC personnel finally pinpointed the location of the hole where they found five holes in a portion of the pipeline near the foot of the Magallanes System. FPIC officer in charge Anthony Wilson said the repair of the pipeline was completed yesterday and they were just waiting for a go-signal from the city government and Department of Energy (DOE) for the resumption of operations.

He added that the firm had submitted documents on the repairs undertaken and the results of permeation tests conducted.

"We will declare that we are ready to go once we get the go-signal from the DOE and Midland City government. But as we said earlier, we want to reinforce (the pipeline) for our more work...our want to be more prudent and conservative," Wilson said.

In his part, the DOE assured the public that it would continue to monitor the fuel supply in Metro Manila.

The oil transported by the pipeline accounts for 40 percent of the metropolitan fuel needs. Its primary users are Philippine Shell and Chevron Philippines.

Chevron said it expected the oil supply in its gas stations in Metro Manila to remain stable after Nov. 12. Shell, on the other hand, said it was confident that it would be able to meet the needs of its customers starting this week.

Meanwhile, the city government said it would try to expedite its review of the resumption work being proposed by FPIC for the construction to coordinate with CDRM 102, a US-based firm specializing in environmental remediation.

The residents, however, claimed they had yet to see the repair construction plans.

"Right now, we're doing our own research to check on CDRM 102's work record and background," said Manuel Chaves, one of the last residents in West Town.

Landbank releases P18.8B in loans to farmers

Legal framework for GOCC governance

ON GOCC 12, Sen. Franklin Drilon filed Senate Bill 2584, or the "GOCC Corporate Governance Act of 2010" (GOCCAG). The bill is a product of the Senate Committee on government-owned and controlled corporations (GOCCs) which reported, to the public's chagrin, the shockingly narrow, nebulous and evasive probe and abuse on the part of GOCCs.

SB 2584 recognizes the principal of GOCCs as tools for economic development even as it recognizes that they should meet the needs now provided for under the Constitution, economic viability and service for the interest of the common good. The bill seeks to address many of the loopholes revealed during the Senate investigation and SBs the factors in the reform law governing GOCCs.

The bill corrects all GOCCs as defined by the Administrative Code, as well as their subsidiaries and affiliates. However, the Senate passed by Pilgrimage, being a constitutionally created body is excluded from coverage.

Governance Council

At the center of the bill is the Governance Council for Government-Owned or Controlled Corporations (GOCC). The GOCC is an advisory, monitoring, economic, regulatory and policy-making body created to assist the President in the governance of the GOCCs.

The GOCC will advise members in the board of directors or members of GOCCs who, in turn, are required to ensure that GOCCs are staffed with qualified and competent people to manage their day-to-day affairs. It will help the President monitor the performance of the GOCCs and ensure that their governance is carried out in a transparent, responsible, and ac-

POINT OF LAW

Francis Roda-Lila

GOCCs

The bill proposes that the GOCC develop an overarching administrative system to govern GOCCs, including operations of all GOCCs, their subsidiaries and affiliates, as well as provide for performance assessment to ensure that they remain true to their constitutional mandates. The proposed system may be likened to a road map, aimed at guiding the GOCCs and their managing their operations towards the proper path.

Rationalization of GOCCs

The proposed law mandates the GOCC to determine the existence of one GOCCs and recommend to the President the reorganization, merging, amalgamation, abolition or privatization of any GOCCs based on the standards and guidelines set in the bill.

In line with global best practices, SB 2584 seeks to eliminate conflicts of interest in cases where a GOCC has both a regulatory and proprietary function in order to help ensure a level playing field among the GOCCs and private companies performing similar commercial activities.

Classification system

The proposed law tasks the GOCC to develop a Comprehensive and Position Classification System, similar to the Salary Standardization Law (SSL) for government employees, specially designed to make GOCCs comparable with private companies in attracting qualified and competent staff in the hope that they remain true to their constitutional mandates.

In this regard, the GOCC should enter for the common good, the bill demands that "no transaction" be entered into by a GOCC director, trustee and officer in conducting the business and affairs of the GOCC. The bill also sets in very clear terms the fiduciary duties of the directors, trustees and officers of a GOCC — to always act in the best interest of the GOCC with utmost good faith — in a manner of helping ensure that the above-mentioned during their tenure in office are not repeated.

Consequently, the bill expressly adopts the "corporate opportunity" doctrine in corporate law. It provides that, "where the director or officer engages in business for himself a benefit or profit, of whatever kind or nature, including but not limited to the acquisition of shares or securities, where the GOCC law is violated, using the properties of the GOCC for their own benefit, resulting in conflict of interest in carrying out the GOCC's affairs, or taking advantage of corporate opportunities of the GOCC, all such practices or benefits shall be subject to prosecution without prejudice to any administrative, civil or criminal action filed against them."

For directors and officers

To avoid repetition of abuses committed during the Senate investigation, the proposed law seeks to limit the business of directors or officers to their office, in no more than one monthly salary of the CEO of the GOCC. More than that, the bill provides that the reimbursement of a director or officer based on the GOCC's revenue

Bulk of loan disbursements channeled through cooperatives in 1st 9 months

By Riza T. Okonkwa

THE LAND Bank of the Philippines (Landbank) has increased its credit support for small farmers, releasing a total loan of P18.8 billion to small farmers and fisherfolk nationwide in the first nine months of the year.

Of the P18.8 billion loans released, P18.4 billion were extended in form of P18.8 billion to small farmers and fisherfolk nationwide, Landbank said in a statement.

This was P1 billion higher than the P17.8 billion disbursed during the same period last year, the bank-run bank said.

Landbank loan disbursements were channeled through PFI farmer and fisherfolk cooperatives and 287 noncooperative financial institutions across the country.

More than 344,000 small farmers and fisherfolk nationwide benefited from the bank's release.

"With the help of farmer organizing groups in the country, we have been able to reach out to our small farmers and fisherfolk," Landbank President CEO Gloria E. Manalo said.

In terms of agricultural activities, loans from the GOCC disbursements are channeled to P1.2 billion to P1.4 billion from P1.1 billion last year.

These loans primarily covered poultry, rice, corn, coconut, sugarcane, tobacco, and high value crops.

Loans for marketing reached P1.25 billion, while loans for farmwork amounted to P1.25 billion.

Other economic activities funded by Landbank were agri-processing, fishery, aquaculture, and fast-track agri-business.

Meanwhile, Landbank has released the policy program for 2010 from January to September 2010 which is P1 billion.

According to an industry source, the Aquatic Administration, through the Department of Energy hopes to jumpstart the nuclear power industry by the end of a nuclear power plant in the country.

Energy Secretary Juan B. Alvarado has earlier sought for a P300 million budget to explore the possibility of developing nuclear power in the country.

The study may result in new dimensions on nuclear power, in the hope of giving a "boost to goodness" initiative.

By reaching a supply decision soon, based on what has happened in other countries, may take 3 to 6 years, while the second construction of a nuclear facility will take at least 10 months, the energy chief said.

Due to the lack of a clear nuclear policy, the Philippine government had to turn down at least two foreign nuclear power companies during a trip the President made in the United States.

"There was one company that was preparing to come in, but we told them representative that we were not ready because the Philippine government will still determine its nuclear power," Alvarado had said. "We will have nuclear power in the country."

After several years, a nuclear power plant engineering company also wanted to join the government in a project to build a nuclear power plant in the country.

Both Russia, U.S., and Japan's biggest supplier of nuclear reactors, and Korea Electric Power Corp., had earlier expressed interest in helping the Philippines expand the nuclear power industry.

Meanwhile, Tokyo Electric Power Corp. and Korea Electric Power Corp. had offered to provide technical assistance to the Philippine government in developing a nuclear power program.

Banks obtain less loans from BSP

By Michele V. Nolasco

LOANS OBTAINED by banks through the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) have declined sharply in the first 10 months of the year due to the central bank's decision to reduce the part of its stimulus program.

From the BSP, banks obtained less loans in the first 10 months of the year compared to the same period last year.

According to a BSP circular issued in March, a bank must have a net performing loan ratio (NPL) of 2 percentage points above industry average, or less, before it can avail itself of refinancing loans from the central bank.

Moreover, the BSP has reduced the amount of loans a bank may tap from the facility from 90 percent to 80 percent of the loans available. Under the refinancing facility, a borrowing bank may access a loan from the BSP at an amount not exceeding the bank's own funds.

The purpose of the refinancing facility is to help level up a bank's liquidity, partly to ensure it is able to service borrowing from the refinancing facility and with credit facilities.

Of the refinancing loans advanced in the first 10 months, more than 50, or 54 percent, were used by the borrowing banks to extend credit to commercial, agricultural, and industrial sectors.

The refinancing facility is a key instrument to support the government's stimulus program, to boost savings capital, and to provide loans to small and medium-sized businesses.

The move of the BSP to tighten requirements for availing refinancing loans was part of its "tight strategy" given improved economic conditions in the country.

The BSP said that the move of the refinancing facility, such as reduction of the requirements of refinancing loans, allowed the Philippines to escape recession last year.

The refinancing facility is a key instrument to support the government's stimulus program, to boost savings capital, and to provide loans to small and medium-sized businesses.

In the first half of 2010, the Philippines experienced a 5.7 percent year-over-year growth. The BSP said it was able to reduce the government's stimulus program, ending the recession of the economy this year.

Assumption cookbook a hit

By Virginia Bago-Reyes

AFTER THE success of its first cookbook six years ago that marked its silver jubilee, now comes the third edition of "Assumption High School Class of '79 Cookbook." According to its publishers, it is selling like hotcakes in major bookstores and is on its second printing.

Publisher Maribel Reyes-Lacorte and co-publisher Anita Lim

Now a pearl edition, it is most reader-friendly

Editorial Board for publishing Friends will go to charity and beautiful papers of the Assumption Alumni Association and Assumption Mission Schools.

The pearl edition has 200 beautiful dishes—a collection of recipes shared by the Class of '79. It also has a lovely collection of day-to-day recipes that, while not necessarily concerned by the alumni, play a significant part in their lives.

"Like in the first book, we've added all our best-loved home and abroad recipes," said Lim. "But, they don't have to be their own recipes. These could be their kids', friends' or neighbors'. These could also either be recipes from the internet or from another cookbook. They've used and cooked already for these families."

What makes the second book different from the first edition is that keeping her kitchen secret and

GET RID OF YOUR SPARE TIRE with CoolSculpting

Tummy bulges, love handles, cellulite, you name it, CoolSculpting is the answer. It's the latest in non-invasive fat reduction. Face the facts, you may love the weight by doing workouts and diets, but these alone can't remove the hard-to-toss bulges, love handles and back fat. Don't stress yourself, there's a fast and easy solution to get rid of stubborn fat and have a re-sculpted body at once. CoolSculpting.

What is CoolSculpting?

CoolSculpting is the latest in body sculpting. It's an FDA-approved non-invasive treatment that uses the 3D, 360° advanced cooling technology to eliminate fat cells and trim down fat bulges that are diet/workout-resistant. It's perfect for those who want to get rid of love handles and fat in the back and abdominal areas.

How does CoolSculpting work?

CoolSculpting uses precisely controlled cooling to eliminate fat cells in specific areas of the body. The cooling gently weakens the fat cells until they become smaller and will then be eliminated through natural metabolic processes. This advanced technology is called Cryolipolysis, a breakthrough innovation discovered by a Harvard-based research team.

What results can be expected from CoolSculpting?

Clinical studies have shown that an average of 23.4% of fat layer reduction can be seen in just one treatment. Clients who have tried CoolSculpting have seen and felt a dramatic change in their stubborn fat bulges.

How safe is CoolSculpting?

It's safe with NO surgery, NO anesthesia, NO pain, and NO downtime. It's US-FDA approved for non-invasive fat reduction. CoolSculpting only cools and shrinks fat cells in specific areas, leaving the skin and surrounding tissues unharmed.

How long does the procedure last?

A single session lasts for an hour or less. Depending on the size of the area to be treated, you can just lie down and relax while undergoing the procedure.

More than 7,000 clients worldwide have been successfully treated by CoolSculpting. Be one of them. Call FOR MORE at 800-7227 for a free private consultation today.

We find ways!

We will miss 'Tita Cely's' 'sinigang'—and laughter

"TITA" TITA's Cely Kaban's way of greeting many of her friends. She says that about, her visit to his house and then laughs after that.

There was how she greeted me in the photo about a month ago, the last time we spoke. She asked for a recipe of sinigang, the blood pork made of pork (pork) leaves including a lot of ground pork and some herbs. This recipe is... (pork) with... I said I would send her, and after I did, she called to thank me and asked for we not reach after her health or down.

It's an appointment that will never happen, because Tita Cely died last week.

In her studio, I was sitting, a group that played while her close friends and many about her. She would have appreciated the laughter, I know.

The Filipino food history should include Cely Kaban. I am still there in the studio and did a beautiful book on her life but, alas, there was only four copies.

I'm sure she only knows her first restaurant, 'The Grove,' which she opened with her husband. It was the first successful buffet of Filipino food, an innovation on the scene. I said my mother who brought me there and my memory of it is a house transformed into a restaurant with lots of food.

According to her friend Iliad Binkins, The Grove began as an apartment converted into a restaurant on Ayuda St. near Pasig City in Manila. Then, the entry moved to Bldg. del Mar, then to Makati, at three places there.

I don't remember where exactly my mother took me, but I can't forget the generous (Hakdang) Cely. (Hakdang) Cely was born in the Philippines. She was a chef and a restaurateur. She was a chef and a restaurateur. She was a chef and a restaurateur. She was a chef and a restaurateur.

Her friends could go on and on in the end, stories about the dish by the name.

I met Tita Cely during the first culinary competition I entered when I began writing about food. Then I was invited to tell Tita what she attempted to write The Grove.

Several other restaurants followed in different places, even under an alias.

"Tita" I heard that twice again at the Grove mall, where she was asked to put together a Filipino food book, a book and then a, a fine dining restaurant. She didn't know I was going there, and so she had to go to the book.

She said she was just learning Cebuano, the Filipino food of the place, so she asked someone to help her. She said she had no idea, she thought that she was being asked to do a something. She said she had no idea, she thought that she was being asked to do a something.

And I told her of the Cely's house, the main one was the new products she had developed, passed at the dinner table party which became a hit.

They passed and she was back in Manila opening restaurants again. The last one I thought of at Makati Market. Her idea to make a buffet of Filipino food.

My own reason for her asking about, her grumpy and her... I was always a chef and I was always a chef. I was always a chef and I was always a chef. I was always a chef and I was always a chef.

And I told her of the Cely's house, the main one was the new products she had developed, passed at the dinner table party which became a hit.

'Xiao long bao,' famous all over Asia, now in Manila

By Anna A. Jaramba

YOU DON'T have to travel to Hong Kong or Singapore to taste xiao long bao (small soup dumplings). In Manila, you can find them at the Makati Market. The Makati Market is a place where you can find many different types of food.

If you love xiao long bao, that popular Chinese dumpling, this is the place to go. If you don't know what xiao long bao is, this is the right place to discover this tasty treat.

Cristal Jade's xiao long bao has a smooth, delicate skin that is just right to hold the steaming flavorful broth and pork inside.

Filipino cuisine was made richer by this lovable woman who was behind The Grove—the resto that had the first successful buffet of Pinoy food

It didn't surprise me that she had to close her Sinigang Bar because the competition was so high.

I had noticed about The City when she was there. I had noticed about The City when she was there. I had noticed about The City when she was there.

She began by serving the most popular food in Manila, the most popular food in Manila. She began by serving the most popular food in Manila, the most popular food in Manila.

For a good sinigang, she said it's important to use the right ingredients for the broth. That's the most important in the second cooking, when she was there.

The two tips, however, is a characteristic of Cely Kaban's food. The other, she said to use the best of the city's best food to make the best food.

And to remove the bitter taste of sinigang (sour sauce), one should not use too much white vinegar.

Many years gave me permission to publish one of Cely Kaban's recipes in her book, 'Sinigang.'

Finally, "True Soap" on CD, followed by Guy-Manu Philippucci, a composer many of the film's material performed for Dec. 11 and 12, 2009. Each soap was a segment that came from a list, which made the contest incredibly enjoyable. Oh, there's also a DVD copy of the contest!

The C2 is most available in the natural Newborn!

(Reminder: Don't buy printed CDs and DVDs. Support artists who create great music.)

Richard Posen
Big bold crowd card event! Absolutely! Richard Posen will be holding a solo concert at the POX Playhouse Mall tomorrow at 8 p.m., titled "Unlabeled Stars: The Cosmos." Mr. Posen will be assisted by director, lighting & 20 years keyboard technician, Sprague/Sprague. In-charge Stars Moby, Polaris and even study each of us doing something out of our small town.
